Cyril Cassisa, PhD Project Manager, Enerdata

Cyril, Project Manager at Enerdata, is a senior expert on energy and climate policy analysis. He joined Enerdata in 2015 after a 10-year experience between China and France in academic research on climate and energy economics and cooperation development on environmental fields between the two countries. He now works as a project manager in the Global Energy Forecasting team, using the POLES model and further in-house models for scenario building and analysis. Cyril is currently the lead expert on a WB project that aims to develop a tool assessing G20 INDCs. He was also a member of the high-level Sino-French expert group on climate change and participated to UNFCCC with the French Delegation from COP19 to COP21. His research activities cover carbon market and renewable energy policies worldwide with a particular focus on EU and China. Cyril graduated as a doctor from Ecole Centrale Lyon in co-direction with the Chinese Academy of Sciences.
